

Table calculations in Tableau allow you to perform calculations on your data within a specific context, such as across rows, columns, or within a partition. They enable you to derive new insights and analyze data at a more granular level. Here's how you can create table calculations in Tableau:

Example: Running Total Sales Suppose you have a dataset that contains information about sales amounts for different products and dates. You want to create a table calculation to calculate the running total of sales.

Sheet 3

